Union Polls Reveal Student Wants

Wednesday, the Daily Universe will present names selected from student polls as possibilities for a student union building and

These names will be placed on a ballot and run on page two of the paper. Students are requested by Mark Murphy, Universe editor, to tear out these ballots and place them into boxes located in the lobbies of the Smith, Grant Library, BSC, McKay and SFLC buildings, casting their vote to name the student building.

Over 90 names have been proposed for the student building to date. This vote is an attempt to gain student opinion as to what they consider the best name might be.

The tabulation of this vote will be published, and a special letter will be sent to President Ernest L. Wilkinson to present him with the students opinion.

The Daily Universe has recently been publishing a series of news articles and editorials about the soon to be constructed student union building.

According to Murphy the object of these editorials and stories has been to inform the student body and determine student opinion with regard to the proposed student union building

Bird said, "We expect a great year for AMS. This will only be possible by lots of studentbody interest and participation."

Feud Looms Over Postal Cut; Campus Feels Little Change

Postal workers throughout the nation labored Monday to clear up postponed deliveries of mail that stacked up over the weekend, while the Brigham Young University post office did not feel much change.

Campus post office did have "land office" mailing business Monday however.

Service Curtailed

As the postal workers labored, additional service curtailments went into effect including reduction in the number of deliveries to business districts and the shortening of post office window operation.

House appropriation committee chairman Clarence Cannon, (R-Mo.) accused Postmaster General Arthur S. Summerfield of a "deliberate violation of the law" in spending funds appropriated by Congress faster than authorized.

He said Congress will be endangering all future economy reforms if it gives Summerfield the money he wants "because if one department can do it, every department can do it."

Senator Speaks

Cannon said, "Not only is he a bad administrator, not only is he a poor businessman, not only is he a violator of the law, but he is also a poor judge of the sentiments of the people."

He urged House members to refuse to give Summerfield the money.

If the House completes action today, the Senate is expected to pass the extra money measure either Tuesday or Wednesday.

Multiple Sclerosis Sets Meet

Utah Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society will conduct a get-acquainted meeting for Utah Valley Multiple Sclerosis victims Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the new City Utilities Building Auditorium, 251 W. 8 N.

The meeting, which is being held as an attempt to initiate a chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society in Provo, will feature William Thurman, President of the Utah Chapter, as the main speaker. Further entertainment will be provided by Gordon Moody, a Naval flier, who will show motion pictures.

Sterling G. Callahan, assistant professor of secondary education and a ten year victim of Multiple Sclerosis, is aiding the Society in their efforts to help Utah County victims.

According to Prof. Callahan, there are more than 400 cases of the disease in Utah. These range from light cases such as his own to those who are blind and completely paralyzed.

Since there is no cure for the disease, the society will attempt to provide its members with moral support, and help them keep abreast of all new developments that might ease their suffering.

As spokesman for the society, Prof. Callahan urges all students to encourage anyone they know who is a victim, a friend or a relative of a victim, or anyone who is sympathetic towards the work of the society to attend the meeting.

Placement Bureau Organizes Crews For House Cleaning

Two crews of men students have been organized by the Placement Bureau as professional housecleaners and will make the rounds of Provo homes doing spring cleaning

Like crews, in past years, have cleaned medical centers, business buildings, basements and more than 200 homes from American Fork to Spanish Fork.

They sometimes clean entire homes, often only one room, and other times just windows and floors. They have even doubled as baby-sitters on occasion.

Work is done on a contract basis, so speed is a major concern of the students according to the placement bureau.

A demonstration job completely cleaned three rooms and a hall in 45 minutes last autumn.

Unit Performs Service Duty For Community

Ten Delta Phi pledges called Neophytes are now performing service projects in order to join the missionary organization.

Pledges must give one hour service to the community, school and fraternity to teach them the traditions of service, social and spiritual aims of the fraternity.

The school service project this quarter is taking a mission travel survey in cooperation with President William F. Edwards and the general authorities.

Service to the unit is building of poster stands and the community project is cleaning the grounds of the City and County Building downtown.

Delta Phi was originally organized on the University of Utah campus as the Friars Club directed by Apostle John A. Widtsoe. He recognized the need for the continuing fraternal and spiritual relationship which men had experienced in the mission fields.

The organization now includes chapters on seven campuses in the West. Membership is open to any man who served as a Christian missionary for any faith at his own expense for at least six months.

K Club Elects New Officers

Another service organization was added to Brigham Young University this quarter.

The Circle "K" Club, an international organization, held its first meeting March 28 to elect temporary officers.

New leaders are MarLon Andrus, Ucon, Ida. president; Lynn Powell, Provo, vice-president; Bill Moore, Manhattan Beach, Calif., secretary; and David Stone, Provo, treasurer.

The club is open to any former Key Club members or other interested persons.

Next meeting will be Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. in room 3241 Smith Family Living Center.

For information call any officer or the faculty sponsor, Neil McKnight.

Jerry's Jargon

by Jerry Cunningham

BASEBALL COMES TO BRIGHAM YOUNG

Baseball at Brigham Young University was launched Saturday. Prior to that time, anything resembling the sport was more or less coincidental.

The Cougars have a new coach, a new playing field and if not an entirely new team, certainly new spirit.

FAIR IN PAST, BETTER IN FUTURE

BYU has had some outstanding baseball players in the past, and the coaching has generally been adequate. But, on the whole, the diamond sport has been buried by lack of interest and facilities.

Strides have been taken toward correcting these two deficiencies. Early this year Jay Van Noy, a former professional, was hired as the baseball coach. Van Noy knows the game. It's our prediction that he'll have the Cougars winning the Conference, if not this year, in the not-too-distant future.

BYU has made appreciable progress in correcting the facilities problem. The playing field, including the grass and basepaths, are an excellent condition. That part of the field is par excellent.

More improvements, however, must be made. Interested fans must have a place to sit down. The two skimpy little sections of bleachers along the first base line are inadequate, if we may deal in understatements. At Saturday's game with the Utes, more spectators were lying on the grass along the left and right field foul lines than were in the "stands."

FANS FOUL UP FOUL BALLS

There were a couple of foul balls that would have been caught easily if the fans hadn't been in the playing area down the left field line.

The ball players need dugouts, and a better fence than that "snow break" would improve the field a lot.

Parking is also a problem. There should be stands or bleachers directly behind the screen which would eliminate even more of the parking area. Also, if bleachers were erected down the first base line, that would infringe on the already inadequate parking space even more.

Foul Shots May Spice Pro Contest

Two of the greatest foul shooters in basketball history will oppose each other when Boston tangles with the Major League All-Stars on the floor of the Smith Fieldhouse April 17.

Bill Sharman of Boston and Adolph Schayes of the Syracuse Nationals both broke the all-time professional record for foul shooting this past season.

This was the fifth straight season that Sharman has led the league in foul shooting. He broke his own record this year by dropping in 35 straight free throws. His previous record was 56.

When Sharman went into a mild slump at the end of the season, Schayes managed to get hot and brought his average to within one percentage point of the leader. The final results: Sharman .9050, Schayes .9045.

In setting the new record, Schayes relied on a two-handed overhead set, while Sharman used the one-handed push shot.

Invitational Meet . . .

Athletes Eye Marks

Track and field records will be in danger Thursday, Friday, and Saturday when BYU plays host to 2,000 high school and junior college athletes.

Visiting participants knocked a large number of records aside last spring, and it is anticipated that many more will be erased this year.

Athletes Eye Honors

Young athletes from five western states are looking forward to bringing honor to themselves and their schools.

Thursday's schedule features junior high school tennis. Four events will be run Friday, and the remainder on Saturday.

The athlete who rolls up the most points will receive the all-around trophy, which went last year to Don Bonkofer, a student in Wenatchee, Wash., who scored 5,478 points.

Cougar Steals Show

Kent Christensen, Dixie College, and Arlyn Finlinson, BYU, were two of the most impressive performers in the last year.

Christensen set new records in the century and 220, while Finlinson set a new mark in the mile by running the fastest half ever run in Utah, 1:53.0.
